There is ...

... a screen shot for every step in section Screen shots.

Login

1. In your browser go to: https://github.tik.uni-stuttgart.de
2. Bookmark the site.
3. Enter your username: st123456 Your full username at the University of Stuttgart is an e-mail address with the following pattern: st123456@stud.uni-stuttgart.de On www.github.tik you have to enter only the first part of your username i.e., everything before the @ sign.
4. Enter your corresponding password.

Change your username

1. At the top right corner go to (click on the pixel symbol): View profile and more > Settings
2. At the left menu go to: Personal settings > Account
3. At the top under “Change username” go to (click on): Change username
Just ignore the statement “Changing your username can have unintended side effects”. Everything is going to be fine.
4. After you clicked the “Change username” button a pop-up menu will appear titled “Really change username? Unexpected bad things will happen if you don’t read this!” Ignore it. (Of course you can read it—but ignore it in the end.)
5. In this pop-up menu go to (click on): I understand, let’s change my username

6. In the new pop-up menu titled “Enter a new username” enter a sensible username like your your full name i.e., your first name and your last name combined without white-space character or any other character Here is an example username: peterpan
7. Click on: „Change my username“.
8. Optionally: Edit your profile, add your city, add a photo, ...

Go to the ethos repository

1. In the top left corner there is a silhouette of a cat (the GitHub symbol) and right next to it there is a search field “Search GitHub”.
2. In this search field enter: ethos
3. On the search result page click on: /martinmaga/ethos
4. Bookmark this site: <https://github.tik.uni-stuttgart.de/martinmaga/ethos>
5. Brows through the repository.
6. Don't Panic! Play around! You are not going to break anything.

Tell us your username at github.tik

1. Let us know your username so that we can add you as contributor to our ethos project repository.
